Preface

It goes without saying that also for the State Archives 2020 was no ordinary working year. In March, archival institutions across Europe closed their doors to the public one by one. In Belgium, this occurred on 13 March 2020. The State Archives closed its reading rooms and entered a period of minimal services. The reopening took place in two steps: On Tuesday, 26 May 2020 for students and doctoral candidates, and on 16 June 2020 for the large public – always in compliance with applicable health regulations of course. Reading rooms were then closed for a second time in fall, more precisely on 26 October in Brussels and on 3 November in the rest of the country. About a month later, on 1 December, students, doctoral candidates and those who carry out archival research by virtue of their profession were admitted to the State Archives again, while other user groups had to wait until 5 January 2021.

All State Archives services could at all times be contacted however, for handling of correspondence, follow-up of reproduction orders, access to buildings for essential maintenance work, etc. And behind the scenes, no effort was spared to make records accessible online for research. Retroconversion – that is to say the conversion of analogue finding aids such as printed inventories into digital documents – was stepped up in 2020. More emphasis was also placed on making an ever increasing number of digitised records available online. Thanks to the ArchPoll online inquiry (30 March–9 April), users were able to have their say in which digitised records should get published online first.

In our new series Podcast@home, archivists shed light on the contents and possible uses of well-known and lesser known records kept at the State Archives. You can watch all videos on the YouTube channel of the State Archives!

The exceptional situation we are all living through has also left a trace in the annual figures: less visits to the reading rooms, hardly any public events, less transfers of records to the State Archives, etc. But: Improved digital access to the archives. The figures presented hereafter reflect the core business of our personnel working at the repositories in Brussels, Flanders and Wallonia, and at some of the Central Services. Nevertheless, a great many of services and activities carried out both on site and online are not taken into account in the annual facts and figures, for example in the departments of communication, digital archiving, and international relations, and the (scientific) activities deployed by the different directorates and the Data Protection Officer. For this reason, the criteria for measuring our activities shall be re-assessed in 2021.

Furthermore, the descriptions of our activities are very broad and therefore cover a large array of products and services. For example, the heading ‘Articles/publications’ covers both short articles for the large public as well as extensive research papers.

It is thus our pleasure to invite all interested readers to visit our website www.arch.be in order to discover the vast diversity of tasks carried out by the State Archives and the scores of services and publications on offer. We hope that the present Facts & Figures 2020 encourage you to do so.
